UK Outlook for Saturday 8 May 2021 to Monday 17 May 2021:
Remaining unsettled with spells of rain, locally heavy, especially across western hills moving from the southwest on Saturday. Further spells of rain and strong winds moving across much of the UK into the new week, with some hill snow in the north. Temperatures returning to near average but often windy with the risk of coastal gales. Thereafter likely remaining unsettled with showers or spells of rain moving across the UK but gradually becoming drier from the west later with lighter winds. The best of any spells of fine and dry weather will likely be later in this period towards the south, interspersed with unsettled periods of showers and spells of rain from the northwest. Temperatures likely to be colder than normal in north but trending towards normal in south.
